

One career. One credential. One choice— Certified in Logistics, Transportation and Distribution, (CLTD).

Jing Zhang, CPIM, CLTD
APAC Logistics Cost Analyst
WABCO

"CLTD is a demonstration of my knowledge and experience in logistics and supply chain; it pays me back for my years of working in this area; it provides me the competency in the job market."

Why did you decide to pursue the CLTD certification?

1. First, it is the reputation of APICS that attracted me to pursue it
2. Second, it's been years since I earned my CPIM certification. I needed to refresh and test my up-to-date knowledge
3. Third, I wanted to check to see if I still had the ability to commit myself to learn something new.

What was your biggest takeaway from the CLTD training?

Supply Chain Network Design, it is relatively new to me although I've done something familiar but not so systematically.

Have you implemented a logistics, transportation and distribution initiative because of your APICS CLTD training?

- Deficit weight: now applied into our transportation bidding activity
- Incoterm: planned to conduct internal training, to refresh peers' knowledge and clear their misunderstanding about it
- Reverse Logistics: in plan to draft procedure to stimulate the customer return etc.

In the future, I'm sure more and more knowledge will be applied and help our work.

How will this logistics, transportation and distribution initiative make a positive impact on your organization?

As the company is expanding, the supply chain network design will help us to better plan for the distribution center, or warehouse at a high level, and it will help us to evaluate / improve current operations.

The knowledge of order management, inventory management and reverse logistics will eventually benefit the organization.
