"CLTD - a game changer for many qualified logistics community members in this region, (Dubai)."

What does it mean for you to be one of the first to earn the CLTD?

I had been targeting the CTL from AST&L for quite some time. I completed my CSCP in 2012 and wanted to specifically get an additional certificate in my domain of interest, logistics. It came as a blessing in disguise when APICS merged with AST&L and offered CLTD as a recognition, and more so with all modules in a single exam. I prepared with the CLTD Learning System with a self-paced study plan, as my rigorous work schedule makes it difficult for me to learn in a classroom environment, though, I love to experience such sessions. The next alternative option was group study, but I hardly found peer groups in my region and hence decided to finally go with the self-study option.

Thanks to APICS for being so co-operative with the ATT approval and exam date window responses, I was able to quickly move myself into preparation mode. Also, I appreciate the compilers of the CLTD Learning System as when I did CSCP too. I got more confident only after going through the practice material and mock tests from the learning systems.

I am proud to hold this additional credential and hope to take it from here in extracting its value and serve as a trainer for budding students and learning groups. I am already an outside faculty in an institute and my passion is to teach and inculcate students with more conceptual knowledge both from text and industry for their overall development in their careers.

Why did you decide to pursue the CLTD certification?

The purpose of going for the CLTD is not only to add to my CSCP credential, but also, to get closer to the body of knowledge, (BOK) that logistics as a field can offer to my job. I feel more comfortable when interacting with current and prospect customers who recognize my qualification, which is favorable for my employer.
